High School Tennis Player Spotlight: Sydney Fuger

Meet Sydney Fuger, a remarkable high school tennis player from the KC area. Not only does Sydney excel on the court, but she also dedicates her time to giving back to her community. Despite the temptation to focus solely on her training, Sydney prioritizes playing for her high school team and her team can always count on her. Tennis runs deep in her family, with both her parents having a background in the sport. Sydney's mom, Amy, is also a solid tennis player and played college tennis. Sydney's dad was a multi-sport athlete and played high school tennis, as well. Sydney has been volunteering with the Stephanie Waterman Foundation, a local nonprofit in Kansas City, for several years. Through fundraising and on-court activities, she helps provide tennis training and opportunities to urban kids in the area. Sydney's commitment to service is commendable, and her involvement with the foundation's Junior Board sets a great example for her peers. Scott Hanover, the Executive Director of the foundation says, "The Foundation is thrilled to have high school-age volunteers like Sydney who make up our Junior Board. Our kids need to see other players their age engaged in our association. We're thrilled with the service Sydney has provided over the years." We're grateful for players like Sydney who make a positive impact both on and off the court, enriching the lives of others through the game of tennis.

Tips from Coaches

"If you are one of the best players on the team spend some time hitting with and helping the players not as good as you." -Coach Bobby Walker
